“Walvoil Home, a virtual experience” is online. What is this? Basically it’s a platform that allows an immersive experience to discover the Walvoil products and world. Already used for webinars and training sessions, since the end of May and in time for participation in the IFAT international trade fair, it has been accessible to all interested parties via the company website.

Walvoil Home, a virtual experience

We have often talked about Walvoil, the Interpump Group company focused on integrated products, electronics and complete mechatronics systems. Recently, about the cooperation with Dieci, the TH manufacturer. Now we’re on this communication tool meets also the guidelines accompanying us in our daily activities: innovation, continuity and integration.

The official of the Italian company says “with the aim of offering an exploration, a more immersive experience than Walvoil already offers in terms of products and solutions, but also of its own world. Not only for the needs coming from the last two years of the pandemic. It will accompany us by integrating other means of communication and ways of relating, tools and events that already belong to us.

It’s accessible from the website

Hence the name we have attributed to it, Walvoil Home, our home, in which we are pleased to welcome those who want to visit us. Transparent and in communication with what surrounds us is the way we have chosen to represent ourselves, so that every environment corresponds to the sector our products and solutions have been developed for. We like to call it technology made simple. Accessibility is in fact the other value, which inspired us in designing it together with our partners.

But it is also a technology in which we don’t want to lose a human touch, as already experienced during webinars and training sessions shared with our customers. What can be explored? What is available at the moment are information on the solutions for the main application sectors (construction and earthmoving, agriculture, industrial vehicles, lifting and transport) and an overview of Walvoil in the world and of the Walvoil Test Department, the operational core of our R&D.”
